Web columnist Brian Wright authors New Pilgrim Chronicles, a manifesto for freedom and citizen empowerment

Amherst, NH— Recent New Hampshire resident and Web opinion columnist Brian Wright today announced the publication of

“With a long-cherished tradition of excellence in the arts, literature, and science, KSC hopes to continue as a premier higher-education option for the discriminating student of the 21st century,” said Mr. Wright. “I’m impressed with the mission and values of KSC, and will be equally energetic in promoting its proud tradition and goals.”

As three-time chairman and four-time newsletter editor of a statewide political party, Mr. Wright authored scores of news releases; was interviewed countless times for TV, print, and radio; and handled all communications for his four campaigns for political office, including US Congress, through 1994.

He has actively performed student outreach on major Michigan campuses—including the University of Michigan, Michigan State University, and his alma mater Wayne State University—giving numerous lectures and participating in discussions. He empathizes with students, and believes they should be active, informed citizens of their communities.

A longtime technical developmental editor, Mr. Wright coauthored Interdomain Multicast Routing, published by Addison Wesley in 2002; he thoroughly enjoys translating complex material into comprehensible prose. “Brian is the most organized, positive, and constructive writer I’ve had the pleasure of managing,” stated Cathy Keller, former director of corporate communications at MPACT Immedia Systems. “He not only understands (and can describe) technology, he has a unique flair for creating marketing and promotional language that enhanced our investor-relations publications,” she said. “His work ethic is exemplary and he cares deeply for achieving team goals. I wholeheartedly recommend him for the creative staff of any enterprise, especially one that caters to youth and the promulgation of new ideas.”

Brian Wright is a terrific prospect for the for the media position at the campus college relations office. To schedule an interview, please contact him at 248/320-2813 or email at brian_r_wright@yahoo.com.
